office entered the vehicles into the NCIC system which notifies any officer that runs the registration that the vehicle is stolen. Sheriff Hays had asked the public's assistance to recover the vehicles and return them to their owners.

On Tuesday, December 18, Sheriff Hays received a call that a maroon Jaguar was seen abandoned near a cemetery in the Welchburg area in An-nville. When Hays responded to the scene, he verified the Jaguar matched the description of the vehicle they were looking for. The vehicle was inspected by Deputy Weaver and transported to a secure location.

On Monday, December 24, the sheriff received another call from dispatch that someone knew the location of the vehicle stolen on KY 2004. The caller provided instructions which lead officers to Gray Hawk Park Road where they found the 2004 gray Chevy Malibu backed into the woods. The officers said that the vehicle was sitting on blocks and many of the parts had been removed. They ran the plate and confirmed it was the vehicle that had been stolen.

Unrelated to the three prior stolen vehicles, On Christmas Day, according to a report from Jackson County Sheriff's Office Lieutenant Keith Berry, Deputy J. R. Weaver located a stolen 2016 Harley Davidson motorcycle and a stolen 2011 Ford F-150 4 door super cab pickup in Sand Gap.

After further investigation, Lieutenant Keith Berry arrested Don Allen Stephens in connection with the stolen 2016 Harley Davidson and the 2011 Ford F-150 that Deputy Weaver had recovered and charged him with two counts of receiving stolen property $10,000 or more.

difficult for consumers to navigate the health care landscape over the years, all of the organization's wholly owned hospitals and more than 1,200 care sites now carry the AdventHealth name and logo, with a brand promise to help consumers feel whole. "This is a historic day for our organization, and I can't be more excited about the direction we are heading," said Terry Shaw, president/CEO for AdventHealth. "Our facilities and team members are galvanized around one name, brand and mission, and in doing this, we will deliver on our promise of wholeness and make the health journey easier for consumers."

AdventHealth, which is sponsored by the Seventh-day Adventist Church, is an expression of the church's health care ministry. The new name conveys an expectation of things to come in health care, while also drawing a strong connection to the organization's rich Seventh-day Adventist roots. The AdventHealth logo is a symbol of wholeness that illustrates the breadth and diversity of a connected system of care, and at its core is the cross, which is at the center of the organization's work.

"More than 150 years after the Adventist health care ministry began, we are proud to carry on this legacy as AdventHealth to provide healing, express love and impart hope upon those we encounter on our sacred mission to deliver Christ-centered, whole-person care," said Gary Thurber, board chairman for AdventHealth.

As part of the brand transformation, AdventHealth has launched a new, consumer-centric website, www.AdventHealth.com. Complete with a new easy-to-navigate user interface, the website features enhanced search functionality, appointment scheduling capabilities, self-service billing and payment options and helpful content for health care consumers.

Ahead of the brand initiative, the organization introduced a unique internal culture and service initiative called "The Whole Care Experience," which aligned 60,000 team members to deliver consistently on its mission, vision, values and service standards. Publicly, a comprehensive, four-month transition campaign featured AdventHealth digital, print and television advertising.

"We have a legacy grounded in faith, and a mission powered by thousands of dedicated and compassionate team members," said Shaw. "Historically, we have consisted of about 30 brands. Now, united as AdventHealth under one brand promise, we are striving to provide preeminent whole-person care, focused on helping consumers seamlessly navigate from one care setting to the next and committed to never discharging anyone from our care. This is how we will fulfill our mission and be a beacon of light in the communities we serve."

Going forward, consumers can expect to see new AdventHealth signage at hospitals and other facilities. A national advertising campaign featuring the #feelwhole hashtag is also underway in markets across the country. In addition, several major partnerships will prominently feature the AdventHealth brand, including the AdventHealth Training Center, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers' training facility; and DAYTONA Speedweeks Presented By AdventHealth, which is highlighted by the 61st annual DAYTONA 500.

The name change is not the result of a merger or acquisition, and the health system's mission of Extending the Healing Ministry of Christ, affiliation with the Seventh-day Adventist Church, ownership and business structure remain the same.

Manchester Memorial Hospital is now AdventHealth Manchester.

importance of paying close attention to buses as they load and unload our most precious cargo. Not only is it the law, but it is critical to the children's safety to stay a safe distance behind a school bus. Don't pass unless there is more than adequate space to do so safely. Don't ever pass a bus after the flashing lights are initiated and the stop sign is out. Never move until all students are safely off the road, the lights go off and the stop sign is off. Be patient and use courtesy with the bus driver. We encourage bus drivers to report anyone who puts these children in danger and we will definitely prosecute violators.

Domestic situations: Some of our most dangerous calls are wrapped around domestic violence. There is never an excuse to use physical force against anyone inside your home. If an argument develops into violence, one party or the other should walk away, leave the home until tempers cool. People who let their temper get the best of them can end up losing their freedom, if not their lives. As police officers, we are required to respond to those calls, so be understanding of our role as peacemakers.

Speak to your children, don't just yell at them. Talk to them about issues that matter, not just gibberish. Tell them you love them and be a parent, not just their best friend. They will love you back and they will become what you want them to be. Children want parameters and they need to know what is acceptable behavior and what is not. Teach them to respect authority figures, to include parents, teachers, law enforcement and many adults.

When you encounter the police, I expect our deputies to treat you as fairly as you will let them. They have a job to do and they have to guard against someone who will harm them, but we are also still humans like everyone else. Therefore, help us make your situation easier by cooperating and being respectful. Every deputy will in turn be respectful to you.

As we begin a new year, focus on the positive, encourage your family and community and just resolve to do the right thing every day. We will all be better for it. God Bless us in 2019.

public safety. Pastor Edward L. Palmer Sr. presented a session on implicit bias to help judges identify and address personal and systemic biases. Implicit bias refers to stereotypes and attitudes about race, gender and other traits that affect how a person views and makes decisions regarding others. Palmer is a certified diversity trainer and chairman of the Kentucky Subcommittee on Equity and Justice for All Youth.

The session on digital evidence focused on online security and evidence in cases involving information on the dark web, which is used for criminal activity, such as sharing child pornography.

The human trafficking session was designed to give judges insight into how traffickers work and how the internet is being used to sell victims and find perpetrators. The session also covered the complexities of the state's human trafficking laws.

Circuit Court judges with general jurisdiction learned about the role of gangs in fueling the opioid epidemic from an FBI intelligence analyst from the FBI's National Gang Intelligence Center. Family Court judges had sessions on recognizing orders and judgments from courts in other countries and the impact of 2017 tax legislation in family law cases.

All the judges had sessions on LG

We also want to say that we are impressed with the MRT and Portal classes. The moral of the inmates has really been influenced by offering these classes. It gives them something to work for and rewards successful completion.
